Brief Report

"Power tends to corrupt, and absolute power corrupts absolutely."

It is not easy to define corruption. But in a narrow sense, corruption is mostly concerned with "bribery" and it takes several forms. Corruption exists in all nations in the world.

Corruption is an indication of decadence. A corrupt person is termed immoral and dishonest. Only a person with greatly eroded values indulges in corruption.

The problem with corruption is that it threatens the very existence of the society. Corruption is like a leech draining the blood of the society. It exists in the black market in essential commodities, adulteration of even food, bribe, fraud and economic, political and administrative manipulations etc have become a part of life.

We can trace corruption to ancient times. Kautilya, the author of the Arthashastra pointed out corruption of his times. He also talked about the corrupt nature of the honey or the poison that finds itself at the tip of the tongue, so it is impossible for a government servant not to eat up at least a bit of the honey. Corruption is eating up government money and accepting bribes.

Today, although India is free, the government officials have enslaved the general public with their corruption. Most of them are hand in glove with the top percolates down to the lowest rungs of the society. It has thus become widespread even in villages.

The situation is so bad that it looks like India will never get rid of corruption.

Sample 2: 'Secular State' (261 words)

We all know that India is a secular State, and that a secular state has nothing to do with religion; but, what exactly does this mean. Secularism is a state free from other negative forces.

As said above, a secular state does not recognize any religion, which means a secular State, in essence, should not discriminate against any religion.

Earlier things were different; even a hundred years ago in India, people were discriminated against based on religion, faith, caste, etc. There was a lot of persecution of people. The harassed would leave their homeland, their country and suffer a lot. This was also true of the world in general.

Now, thankfully, that is a thing of the past. Due to great thinkers, philosophers and scholars, things have changed. Politics and the government in all countries are secular.

That does not mean religions are banned. Everyone has a right to follow whatever faith he or she wants. The only thing is that, the government should not encourage openly, the government will come to be identified with a particular religion. India is a good example in this regard. Though Hinduism is the majority religion.

Secularism in the State has, thus, extreme importance. A society tends to be equal, homogeneous and peaceful with secularism.

Sample 3: How to control population explosion in India? (263 words)

As we all know, we Indians have the dubious distinction of being the second most populated country in the world. And, very soon we will be reaching the billion mark. It is a cause for celebration!

A large population is a liability and not an asset. In our country, population explosion is the main obstacle to the development in all aspects. So, from this day, it is better to take appropriate measures to keep it under control before it is too late.

Unlike what most people think, population is not an advantage in any manner. Demographic history of various advanced countries shows that as per-capita income increases, happiness and the country's birth rate. When per-capita income increases, people don't desire more children in order to supplement their income. As per-capita income, people feel more secure and do not want to depend on their children. Therefore, rapid economic development is very much essential. As per-capita income will have its positive impact on birth rate after a period of time.

In the Indian society we have joint family system. In joint families, in general a high birth rate is encouraged. Hence this joint family has to be broken up in urbanized and industrialized economies. Hence our efforts should be to industrialize and urbanize our economy to reduce the high birth rate and to control population explosion.
